No Use Fighting against Fate.

A boy, about thirteen years of age, was Saturday forenoon dragging a big, sneakish-looking cur along High street to find an owner for the canine. Ringing a door-bell, he said to the house maid who answered it:

"I've brought your dog home."

"My dog!" she exclaimed as she looked down upon the embarrassed dog.

"Yes; you give me two shillings and I'll tie him up in the back yard."

"I'll give you a broomstick if you don't leave!" she screamed as she grabbed for him.

He dragged the dog across the street to where a girl was scrubbing the front steps, and, bringing a smile to his face, he said:

"Your feller in Chicago sent you this dorg by express to put in your Christmas stocking. The charges are fifty cents. Where shall I tie him up?"

"Git out with ye—I'm no green-horn!" said she, as she raised the brush to hit him.

The boy pulled on the rope with both hands and got the reluctant dog a half block farther, when he met a boy carrying home ten pounds of buckwheat flour. He blocked the way and said:

"Bub, your father told me to bring this dorg up to you and collect thirty cents."

"I hain't got no father," answered the lad.

"Who said you had—I was only fooling. Say, bub, this 'ere is the beautifullest dorg you ever sot your eyes on. He kin sing, dance, clean off the snow from the walk, and bring in rabbits from the country. I'll take a quarter for him."

"I hain't got no money," replied the boy.

"I'll trade him for a knife."

"I hain't got no knife."

"Any old skates?"

"No," answered the boy with the flour, as he dodged around the dog and hurried on.

The other looked down on the canine with mingled sadness and indignation. The dog braced back at an acute angle, his eyes shut, and his tail lying on the walk, waiting for the boy to say:

"Oh you dog! I kept you hid away for a week, and I've hauled you all over town, and you ain't even a three-cent dog. I've fit fate for more'n a month to get some chink for Christmas, and here I am, dead broke and no assets but you, you old sole leather colored skulk! I've got desperate!"

He slackened on the rope to administer a kick, and the dog made a jump and gained his liberty. He ran off around the corner, and the boy leaned against a tree-box and mused:

"There's only one plan left. I'll take paregoric enough to make me sleep from Monday night to Wednesday morning, and I won't know nothin' about Christmas or nothin'!"

A Chicago Boy, Mind You.

The aged and gray-haired, albeit lively father of a well-known West Side politician, who is anxious for a nomination as drainage commissioner, was chatting the other day with a party of his son's political friends, and he was asked how he had ever been persuaded to allow his "Jimmy" to enter politics. "It was like this," he said. "When he was yet quite a small boy I hit upon a plan to test him. I did not know what to put him at when he grew up; so one day I took a Bible, an apple and a silver dollar, and placed them side by side on a table in our parlor. Then I sent Jimmy in there on some pretext. My idea was this: After he had been in the parlor a few moments I would go in and see what he was up to. If he had taken the apple, I intended to make him a farmer; if he had picked up the silver dollar, I would make him a banker; and if he had selected the Bible, I would have trained him for the ministry. Well, I gave him a few minutes' time and then I looked in on him. He had the Bible under his arm, with the silver dollar between the leaves, and he was eating the apple. For a moment I regarded him with amazement. Then I said to myself, 'The boy is a hog, and I'll have to put him into politics.' And that is how my Jimmy became a politician, boys." Every man whistled for the waiter and the first man paid for the drinks.—Chicago Herald.

Answered.

It is human nature for a man to be ashamed of being insignificant or unknown. The meanest occupation does not deprive a man of his being of some importance in the world. But there are men so self-conscious that they are always seeming to expect public attention to be fixed upon themselves. Such a man was a state official, of California. He thought that every body knew him, or ought to know him.

He was one day walking through a field, when a bull addressed him in an undertone, and made for him with its head down and horns in a position to raise him. Although he was a state official, and a man of dignity and political power, he ran surprisingly well. He ran even better than he did for office, and he got to the fence first. He clambered over, out of breath and dignity, and found the owner of the field calmly contemplating the operation.

"What do you mean, sir?" asked the irate official. "What do you mean by having an infuriated animal like that roaming over these fields?"

"Well, I guess the bull has a right in the field!"

"Right! Right! Do you know who I am, sir? Do you know who I am?"

The farmer shook his head.

"I, sir, I am General Dash."

"Why didn't you tell the bull?"

—San Francisco Chronicle.

The governors of about thirty states met in Washington Wednesday to take measures for the erection of a monument to the memory of the signers of the Declaration of Independence and the framers of the Constitution. A bill appropriating money for the monument has been prepared, and if found satisfactory, it will be presented to Congress.

Although the city had a part of Third street scraped last Thursday, and a less part of the mud hauled away, there still remains enough mud on Third street to last for ten years to come. The scraper did some good, but it did not get over enough ground. The West Side deserves its share of attention.

The Cronin case has come to an end with the sentence of life imprisonment passed upon three of the suspected conspirators three year's imprisonment on another, and freedom granted to a third. The case has occupied a greater space of time than any other case in the history of the American bar, lasting from August 26th to December 14th. Although the verdict rendered was not what was expected, yet it has stirred up the American press to the knowledge of the fact that a jury reform must be instituted. Under the present mode of selecting jurors, the tendency is toward the selection of the more ignorant and illiterate, and too great opportunities are offered for the bribing of the jurors. Considerable comment has been drawn from the press by this verdict.

LOCAL NEWS.

Ask for Browns Tar Soap.

Go to Francisco's for drugs.

BOSSARD'S, 112 East Third street, is the boss place for Toys.

The White Line will run a car to the Home to-morrow.

Miss Carrie Wildasin, of South Williams street, is on the sick list.

This is a bad week for school children—at least for some of them—examination.

Buy the boy a watch for Christmas, it will not cost much, at Cotterill's 12 East Fifth street.

Diamond rings, pins, studs and fine jewelry for Christmas presents at Cotterill's 12 E. 5th street.

Rev. Wm. McKee and wife of West Third street, went to Wapakonetta, Tuesday evening to attend the funeral of Mrs. McKee.

Miss Ella Smock, of South Hawthorne street, is acting as substitute in the absence of Dr. Brown, at the Central High School.

A large and handsome variety of useful articles for holiday presents can now be had at Bates &amp; Roesch.

Clarence Culbert is around again without crutches. One leg is shorter than the other, caused by the fall.

Frank Thompson, the cigar man, has been laid up several days with a bad cold.

Mr. Arthur Dunn is taking an important part in the Salvation Army meetings on the West Side.

Robert Watt has removed his place of residence from South Broadway to South Williams street.

Miss Nettie Ray, who for the past year has been living with her aunt, Mrs. Thompson, of South Broadway, has returned to her home in Detroit, Michigan.

Mrs. Houser, wife of Otto Houser, firemen at the Baxter Street Hose House, has been very sick for the past week. She is slowly recovering.

Claud Chrisman and Frank Howell have come home from Delaware University to spend the holidays. They expect to return the next Friday after New Year's.

Officer Jacob Hendershot, of South Broadway, spent last Wednesday in Columbus attending the ball of the Police Benevolent Association of that city, Wednesday night.

Some of the boys of the eighth grade of the Seventh district school brought a goose and proffered it to their teacher. Believing its presentation to be meant as an insult, she refused to accept it, whereupon the boys gave it to the janitor.

Mr. Gaither, lieutenant of the engineer corps of New York City, who has been visiting his sister, Mrs. C. G. Shipley, of South Williams street, for the past two weeks, will leave for New York text Monday.

Thursday afternoon a gang of men and carts were at work scraping and hauling mud from Third street west of the bridge. They got down as far as the News office, we are happy to say, but still enough mud remains on the street to keep a big gang of men busy for a number of days in removing it. The scraper takes off the top, but leaves a great deal of the mud.

Mr. J. G. Feight has met with more bad luck. Yesterday morning, while at work on the new hotel at New Paris, he hung his coat on a fence near by. Some body went through the pockets, taking a pocket book containing valuables to the amount of sixty-two dollars. It has been only a few weeks since Mr. Feight lost a pocket book over in town, containing one hundred dollars.

Mrs. John Hawthorne, mother of Scot Hawthorne, who was injured by the gas explosion was removed from the residence of her son William, to that of Mr. J. R. Hoffman, on West Third street, Friday morning, where the rest of the injured family reside.

The old woman who sometime ago fell through a hole in the second floor of the Williams street Baptist Chapel, was found last night lying on the porch of Milton Finch on Mound street, by Will Finch on his return home. "He waltzed her off to the Baxter street Hose House," we are told, from which she was taken to the station house in the patrol wagon.

One day last week one of our West Side grocery-keepers sent one of his clerks to ship some oyster buckets to West Baltimore by express. The lad took the buckets and started on the errand. Passing J. R. Hoffman's new room and seeing the sign, "Wells, Fargo &amp; Co. Express" on the window, he laid the buckets down on the sidewalk and left them. Fortunately the expressman for whom they were intended, and who had previously been informed about the package to be sent, came along and found the buckets.

Last Monday night a burglary was committed which has not been equalled for some time on the West Side. Tuesday morning Henry Hoffman, residing at 1125 West Third street, upon rising discovered that a burglar had entered his room and obtained a pocket-book containing fifty dollars and a roll of notes amounting to several hundred dollars more. The police authorities were notified, and at once set to work. Officers Shaffer and Hughes made the arrest of Harry Fackler, who was suspected as the party in the crime, and who has been within the walls of a jail many times before on such charges. The pocket-book was recovered, but as to whether the money, which it had contained when stolen, we are not able to learn, as the particulars of the case have been kept secret by the police.

Weather Predictions.

The following are the indications for the first three months of next year, as given us by the News weather prophet. If any should fail, and you get caught in a snow storm on a predicted sunshiny day, don't blame the News, all make mistakes sometimes—even Wiggins.

January—1-20: cold and snowy; on the 9th ten degrees below zero; 20-27: mild; 28-Feb. 3rd: very cold; 6, 7, 8: rainy; 9-15: cold, but not below zero; 15-18 fair and sunshiny; 19: a terrible blizzard; 20-28: cold, but not below 10 degrees above zero; March 3, 4, and 5: rain followed by high winds; 9-14 fair and warmer; 15-17: heavy frosts; 18: rain, high winds, and severe storms in the lake regions; 22: snow; 25: rain with high waters; 29: fair weather. Ice will be included in all cold weather.

A lady while standing in front of a show window on Main street, Tuesday, had her pocket picked and her pocket-book containing nine dollars stolen.

At the noon recess a boy about seven years old while playing in the street in front of the Fifth street school house in the East End, was knocked down by a horse hitched to a spring wagon, and run over by two of the wheels. He was not badly hurt, and when school took up was in his place ready to take up his studies.

Tuesday evening an old gentleman and lady were driving westward on Fifth street at the corner of Fifth and Brown streets when they came near colliding with a street car going northward. The single-tree caught in the spokes of a wheel of the carriage, and the lady jumped out, carrying a large bed comfort with her, which fortunately broke the force of the fall. She was not hurt.

Last Sunday night the residence of Mr. Edward Baird, City Engineer, was burglarized in the absence of Mr. Baird from the city. The thieves obtained silverware valued at two hundred dollars. A liberal reward was offered for the recovery of the property, or information that would lead to the arrest of the parties connected with the burglary. A greater part of the stolen silverware was recovered by officer Dickensheets later in the week.

Messrs. E. J. Barney, J. K. McIntire, D. L. Rike and J. H. Winters, members of the committee appointed to inspect the Davis Sewing Machine Works, made the inspection Wednesday afternoon. Owing to his absence from the city Mr. W. P. Callahan was not able to be present at the inspection. The four men, however, found the building to be complete and satisfactory. The machinery is now being placed in position. Twenty-five out of the fifty thousand dollars subscribed has already been paid over to the company, and the remainder is held by the treasurer, Mr. A. S. Estabrook, to be paid upon certification of the committee that the company has fully performed its part of the contract.

A lady made a purchase of an alarm clock Thursday, intending it as a Christmas gift. As she had other shopping to do, she took the time-piece with her. Entering a store she laid the clock on the counter and proceeded to make purchases. The store was full of people and the clerks busily engaged. The alarm was wound up and set for a certain hour. The proper time arriving the "thing went off" and made a terrible racket, as alarm clocks when in a healthy condition generally do. The unusual noise created a great commotion. The clerks thought an infernal machine had been thrown in their midst. The customers imagined an incipient gas explosion. The result was that every body ran out of the building. The innocent clock did not even raise its hands in fright, but proceeded to rattle on till its work was finished, then was as quiet and unconcerned as if nothing unusual had happened. The crowd returned, thankful that the disaster of their peace of mind was only an innocent clock—Journal.

GENERAL NEWS.

The latest news from Emin Pasha is that there are strong hopes of his recovery.

E. N. Dickerson, the noted patent lawyer, who had been leading counsel for the Bell Telephone Company, died Wednesday night in his residence at New York.

The natives of Swaziland have agreed upon a triumvirate to govern their country. It will consist of two British members and one resident of the Transvaal. The chiefs of Swaziland have also joined in a petition, for the abolition of the liquor traffic in their country.

Joseph G. Ditman, the paper manufacturer of Philadelphia, and also President of the Quaker City National Bank, is missing. Last Wednesday night his carriage was found wrecked on the bank of the river in Fairmont Park, and it is feared that a runaway occurred and that Mr. Ditman has been drowned.

The corporation of London has invited Mr. Stanley to accept the freedom of the city. The ceremony of presentation will take place in the Guild hall. The parchment conferring citizenship will be inclosed in a gold casket. On the evening of the day on which the presentation is made a reception will be given to Mr. Stanley in the Guild hall.

The funeral of Mrs. Scott-Lord, sister-in-law of President Harrison, was held Thursday in the Church of the Incarnation at Washington, and the interment took place at Rock Creek Cemetery. President Harrison, Vice President Morton, members of the Cabinet, and many prominent persons attended the services.

Passengers on the Canadian through express had a narrow escape from death Saturday. While crossing the mountains two coaches left the track and fell over the bank. The coupling held, and the balance of the train kept the cars from falling several hundred feet. All of the passengers were rescued.

Wednesday afternoon David Dillon, an employe of the firm of Funch, Edye & Co., of New York, went down the bay with a companion to board the incoming bark Marie. His companion, Transgaard, boarded the bark, and the sail-boat in which Dillon remained was taken in tow. The line parted, and Dillon's boat was driven out to sea before a gale which was blowing off shore at the time. Nothing has been seen of him since.

The steamer Alagias, with ex-Emperor Dom Pedro, of Brazil, and party on board, and flying the old Brazilian flag, arrived in the Tagus last week. She anchored off Belem, a suburb of Lisbon. King Carlos warmly welcomed the Emperor. Dom Pedro is in excellent spirits and appears not to have suffered by the recent events in Brazil. It is said that he intends to issue a manifesto to the Brazilian people.

at the end with a river. In this current accumulates, in a broad, sparkling track, the foam made by the steamers plying up and down.

One day a lady, a passenger on one of these boats, viewed the pathway of foam with great curiosity, and said, finally, to the captain, "What makes that long line of white?"

Now the captain was a man who loved his joke, and he by no means expected to be taken in earnest when he replied, "Oh, the lake freezes over in winter, and that white line shows where there was a crack in the ice."

"How very interesting!" cried his listener, "I will write that to my husband, who is a professor in a scientific school."

"When she said that," owned the captain afterwards, "I didn't dare to tell her. You can't own up to any body that takes every thing so innocent. So I held my tongue, and hoped she wouldn't tell any body else till her husband had told her that I was most likely a born liar. I've given up jokin'; there's no fun in it when folks believe you!"

Brave and True.

Brune, one of Napoleon's marshals, was made a soldier by the sneer of a witty actress. He had written a pamphlet on military operations, and one day at Danton's dinner-table, it was mentioned, and the actress said, mockingly, to him, "You will be a general, since you fight with a pen."

Stung to the quick, he applied for a commission and entered the army as major. The witty actress having wagged her pert tongue at Robespierre, was sent to the guillotine.

In the army Brune showed that will-power can overcome natural nervousness. In his first battles he suffered tortures from the sight of blood and the noise of cannonading.

Every discharge of a field-piece gave him such a shock in the pit of the stomach that he would have bent double with pain, but for his will, which gave him power to stiffen his legs in the stirrups and throw his body back. When the battle was over his muscles remained paralyzed for hours, on account of the tension to which they had been subjected.

He had a quick temper, which he mastered after many trials. When governor of the Hanse towns, he gave certain orders, which were not obeyed by the burgomaster of Hamburg. The official sought the marshal, and began a long explanation. Now and then Brune, without saying a word, poured himself out a glass of water and drank it.

At last the burgomaster, pausing, stretched out his hand for the decanter, and said, "Will you allow me?"

"Hold!" exclaimed Brune, "we had better ring for a fresh supply. I always pour down water when I feel a fire rising which might explode!"

Brune was massacred by a royalist mob, after Waterloo.

"Shout, 'Live the king!'" said the mob. He refused.

"Shout, 'Down with the emperor!'" called out the mob.

"The emperor is low enough now; this is not the time when I can say aught against him," was the spirited reply.

The enraged rioters answered this noble rejoinder by striking him on the head with a shutter. He fell on one knee, exclaiming, "To have escaped a hundred deaths for this!"

He was killed by pistol shots.

Negro Humor.

An English visitor to this country, who traveled through the Southern States in the early years of this century, gave it as his opinion that the colored people were especially humorous. In support of this opinion he published examples of the wit of this people. Two of these stories will serve to show their own quality, and the quality of humor under discussion.

One of the heartiest pieces of fun I ever heard was the chuckle of a youth who was on duty with a fan to keep the flies from disturbing his master's rest, and who seeing a persevering bluebottle light on the planter's flaming proboscis, and immediately fly off, exclaimed:

"Aha! um berry glad o' dat; oo burn oo foot at last, massa fly!"

A pendant of this but in a quieter way, was the reply of a domestic who went to communicate the news of his master's death to a neighbor. The latter, on recovering from the first shock, observed, with a sigh of resignation:

"Well, Cicero, there's one thing to console us; your poor master had a bad gout, and he's gone to happiness."

"Iss, massa, but um berry sorry he hasn't gone to heb'n."

"Not gone to heaven, you black rascal! Why?"

"Cause, massa, he tell me he should neber be comfortable anywhere where he wasn't berry warm!"
